Parts of harness are numbered under each harness; the numbered parts are carried in stock and may be substituted for any other numbered parts by adding or deducting the difference in the price of the parts substituted. All numbered parts are also priced in the Strap Work section.

CAUTION—CUSTOM GRADE parts that are smooth finish cannot be combined with STANDARD QUALITY parts that are creased, in the same harness.

We Can Make Prompt Shipments On All Numbered Parts

Parts marked SPECIAL in Regular Harness are not carried in stock separately, and where these parts are substituted for regular numbered parts they will have to be made, and charge will be made according to cost of changes.

A Talk on Horse Collars by Jim Dandy

Introducing Jim Dandy, Esq.

We show in the Horse Collar section of this catalogue about 60 styles of horse collars, and each has its particular use and place.

We do not make a universal pattern that will fit all horses; it is an impossibility for any manufacturer to do so; we make various forms to cover a wide range of shapes to be found in horses' shoulders. In fitting collars to horses, it is as necessary to study the forms of shoulders as it is for the tailor to study the forms of men for clothes. As an illustration: In buying trousers, while two men may both take a leg measure of 32 inches, one of them may require a waist measure of 34 inches and the other a waist measure of 40 inches.

It is so with a horse; while one form of 20-inch collar may fit a certain shape of horse, the same collar will not fit a different shape of horse that also takes a 20-inch collar.

In Figure 1 is shown a type of horse that is being bred throughout the Middle West and is typical of all the breeds of heavy draft horses. We show this to indicate one extreme in shape of shoulders found in horses that must be considered in building horse collars.

If you will stand in front of such a horse, facing him, you will notice that the shoulder space for the collar to press on is narrow and slopes away from the neck. By moving to a side view of the shoulder, you will find that this horse has a shoulder blade that sticks out where my hand is placed on his neck. The neck is often as wide THROUGH here at the top of the shoulder blade as it is at the point of the shoulder where the shoulder blade and arm bone join.

This class of horse has what is commonly called a wide neck.

To get the greatest amount of work from such an animal, he must be fitted with a horse collar such as I show in my hand (Figure 1).

This collar is built with an INSWELL on the face side at and above the draft line that hugs close against the sides of the neck and covers as much shoulder space as it is possible to find on this class of horse.

Above the inswell the collar is WIDE TOP on the face to conform to the wide neck formed by the prominent shoulder blades, the spot indicated by my hand in Figure 1.

Such a horse with a wide neck cannot produce his full power unless he has a collar of this form, but when so fitted he can pull more than any other horse of equal weight.

Figure 2 shows a type of horse that may be called, for want of a better name, the American horse, and represents the other extreme in form of shoulders. The part of the shoulder on which the collar must press has less slope, and there is more of a bed for the collar to rest in. Also the shoulder blade is set on in a different way and does not form the thick WIDE NECK as in the draft horse.

The STRAIGHT FACE collar that I show with this horse is the collar that should be fitted to him. Notice that the inside line of the face is comparatively straight from the point of draft or widest part to the top cap.

This is why we term this style of collar STRAIGHT FACE.

Between these two extremes in the form of shoulders of horses are many variations, some horses having less prominent shoulder blades than the draft horse that is shown, and many American horses being slightly inclined away from the STRAIGHT shoulder, thus accounting for the many patterns of horse collars that we show in this catalogue.

It must be obvious to all that to develop the full power of a horse and to put him in a condition to do his best for you he must be properly fitted with a horse collar adapted to his particular form.

If this is not done, the result is loss of power and an injured horse, showing by the galls and fistulas on his shoulders that the collar does not fit.

Do not blame the collar for this; the fault is not with the collar, but with the one who fitted the collar to the horse.

OUR GUARANTEE on the Jim Dandy Line of Collars

Not only covers the material and workmanship of the collar, but also when properly fitted according to the talk herein given, which I trust you will carefully read, we guarantee them in every particular, and if not satisfactory, return them to us, and we will replace or refund the money.

Yours truly,

SCHEFFER & ROSSUM CO.,

By Jim Dandy.

HOW TO FIT A COLLAR TO A HORSE

Examine closely the shoulders of the horse and see that the skin is in good condition. If the skin is not soft to the touch and cannot be pinched up free in a wrinkle, the horse is hide bound. If the skin is marked with nodules or pimples, it indicates a bad condition of the blood, and in both instances a collar put on such a horse will tend to increase the disease.

Do not fail to notify the owner of the condition of the animal in order that the effects of the collar will be placed to its true cause—the disease, and not the collar.

Observe closely the conformation of the horse and determine what pattern of horse collar will correspond with the form of his shoulders.

Under no consideration of expediency or profit put a collar on a horse that does not conform to the shape of his shoulders. A misfit collar ruins the horse and ruins your reputation. A properly fitted collar makes a customer for all time.

To Measure a Horse for a Horse Collar

See that the horse is standing on level ground, with his four feet even.

Find out how he holds his head when driving and have some one hold his head up or down as he carries it.

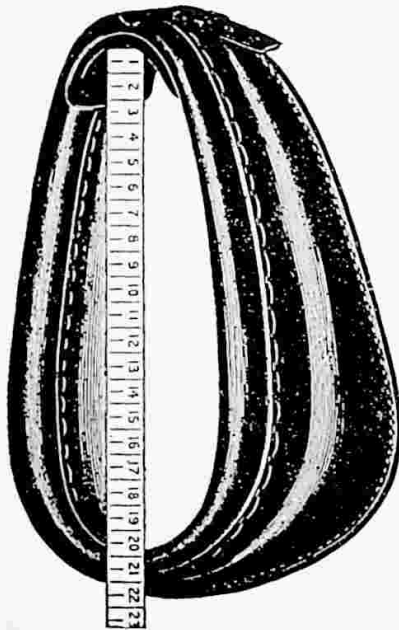

Figure 3.

Place your yardstick where the outside edge of the rim of the collar will come on the horse's neck; place your other hand flat across the top of the neck and touch this hand with the top end of the yardstick; sight horizontally with the bottom of the neck and the yardstick, and you have the length measure of the collar as shown in Figure 3.

Select a collar of this length and of a proper pattern to fit the horse.

Put the collar on the horse and buckle the top up close. Shove the collar back on the shoulders with a strong but even pressure; look carefully to see that the collar presses on the whole shoulder and does not ROCK on the shoulder.

See that the body (not the rim) presses close against the SIDES of the neck and does not extend out so far as to touch the joint of the shoulder and arm bone or what is commonly called the point of the shoulder.

There should be room at the throat of the collar to pass your four fingers in between the collar and the horse, as I show in Figure 4.

There must be no pressure at the throat, as the wind-pipe is close to the outer skin, and pressure here cuts off the breath of the horse.

Buckle the hames so that they lie close and snug in the hame bed and see that bolt of the hames CENTERS on the draft line of the collar.

Collars fitted as above with knowledge and care bring reputation and profit to you and comfort and power to the horse.

JIM DANDY COMBINED HORSE COLLARS AND SWEAT PADS.

The Cushion Face on our JIM DANDY LINE of Collars is produced by combining with the liner of the collar a thick fabric of clean resilient hair that is impervious to water and will not rot or sour.

The nature of the fabric is such that it retains its properties indefinitely.

The combination of the fabric and collar liner forms a double face between the shoulders of the horse and the straw backing of the collar, producing a smooth, springy surface that is the ideal cushion for the shoulders of the horse.

WARNING.

Do not confound the JIM DANDY CUSHION FACE Collars with either the felt faced or hair faced collars formerly sold.

Felt was introduced in collars many years ago, but on account of its absorbing moisture like a sponge, causing fermentation and decomposition (sour and rot), did not prove efficient.

The old-fashioned curled hair faced collar of our fathers' time was a good collar, but now is only a tradition, killed by the substitution of shoddy flocks or pig hair mixed in with the straw and as apt to be on the back of the collar as on the face.

Our experiments and researches in this field have been assisted by some of the best veterinary surgeons, and combined with the experience and practical knowledge in manufacturing collars that we have gained in our many years of business, they have produced the

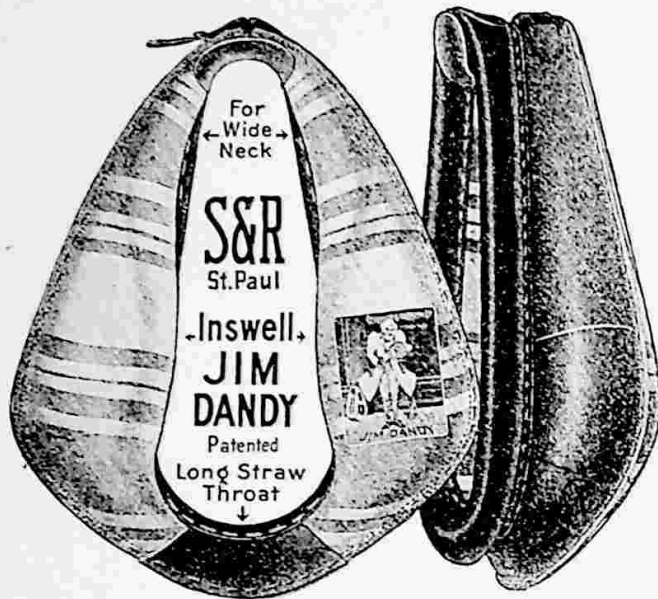

JIM DANDY CUSHION FACE COLLAR.

It is not an experiment, but has back of it the acid test of time and use, and each and every collar carries with it our ABSOLUTE AND UNQUALIFIED GUARANTEE.

SELLING TALK

One of the penalties imposed upon a nation of non-combatants in a time of war is the absorption of war material from the peace nations.

One of the main requirements in fitting out an army is LEATHER and our Country has been drawn upon by all the warring nations for this purpose.

Hides, the raw material of the tanner, are a by-product and an increase in the demand for leather by no means increases the supply of hides.

The class of raw hides from which Collar Leather is made are today higher in price than ever before. Our surplus stocks of leather are gone and we will not have cheap leather until the slow accumulations of peaceful times again overtake the demand.

Anticipating this condition and realizing that all leather products must for a long time to come command a much higher price than in the past, we have made and here present a line of that for fit and wear are the equal of any collars produced in the past from Collar Leather and at a price that will enable you, Mr. Dealer, to offer your trade a collar guaranteed in every respect and the equal in fit and wear to any collar made, than your customers have paid for collars in the past.

AT NO HIGHER PRICE

We ask your co-operation and assistance in presenting JIM DANDY COLLARS to the consumer who will PAY NO MORE THAN BEFORE FOR COLLARS.

A thick fabric of clean springy hair lies under the face of the collar next to the horse. The fabric makes a smooth springy surface against the shoulder for the horse to pull on, and we are able thereby to make the backs where the hame rests hard. This is the ideal collar—a soft springy face and a hard rigid back.

HOW SWEAT PADS ARE MEASURED.

To determine accurately the length of a Sweat Pad, it should be spread out flat and then measured with a tape line from the center at top to a point midway between the two lower points.

To determine the width of a Sweat Pad, measure with a tape line across pad at its widest part from seam to seam.

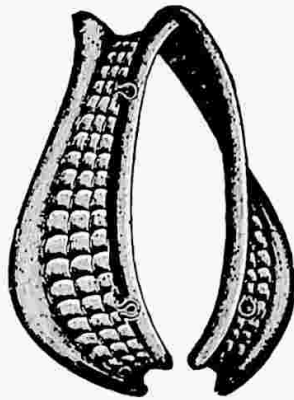

The above illustration shows a pad that measures 22 in. in length and 12 in. in width.

BLACK OR RUSSET LEATHER.

Unlike anything before on the market; are perfectly smooth when attached, showing no buckles or hardware of any kind—making as neat and attractive a handle as though it were made on the grip or bag.

The Gilbert Grip and Bag Handles can be attached in an instant, by simply pressing the hook end in "till it clicks," making a very strong and attractive handle that will hold its shape during the life of the handle, the grip handle being made of the best collar leather and steel hooks and springs.

A few keys are furnished dealers with each order, for the purpose of detaching handles if desired.
